railways. At the end, departure with the historical train of the Italian Subappennina Railway, that from Fabriano arrives in Pergola. The Italica Subappennina Railway was born as an alternative ridge to the Adriatic coast line, it was supposed to start from Sant'Arcangelo di Romagna to cross the Valmarecchia, until connecting Urbino to Fermignano and Pergola, ending on the Rome-Ancona near Fabriano. The only part entered in service, however, was the Urbino - Fabriano. A unique journey aboard a historic train from Fabriano to Pergola, which crosses the Marche Apennines between medieval villages and cities of art, in a breathtaking natural landscape. The train ride, in addition to lunch in a restaurant, includes a visit to the Gilded Bronzes Museum of Cartoceto, the only group of gilded bronzes in the world that has come from the Roman age to our days. The complex represents a probable family group, originally composed of two pairs of cloaked and veiled female figures, and two knights in military dress of high rank, with richly decorated horses. Not to forget also the visit to the Mines of Zolfo of Cabernardi, one of the main mining centers of the Marche, a suggestive itinerary through which the visitor can know a unique reality and appreciate a distant history, but indissolubly linked to the territory of the Marche. End of services.
